Foreword

A world that remembers the Holocaust through both commemoration and education is a world in which the horrors of the past will hopefully never be repeated. The Holocaust provides the ultimate lesson on what happens when societies do not resolutely reject harmful prejudices and continuously strive to counter all forms of intolerance. By focusing attention on one of humanity's darkest episodes, Holocaust Memorial Days provide an opportunity to commemorate the victims of National Socialism and at the same time reflect on what we all can do to create more peaceful, tolerant and inclusive societies.

For many people – not least the victims – the liberation of the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp on 27 January 1945 symbolizes a threshold between the unthinkable past and an uncertain future. Many participating States of the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) have designated 27 January as their official International Holocaust Remembrance Day. In this way, they pay tribute to all victims of Nazi persecution while renewing their pledges to forge a future free from hate.

Throughout the OSCE region, policymakers and educators have worked to ensure that young people study the Holocaust as a substantive part of school curricula. Memorial sites pinpoint the geographic location of some of the atrocities committed, providing a physical link between the past and the present for generations young and old.

However, all too often the values underpinning Holocaust education are increasingly at odds with those practiced outside the classroom. Persistent attacks against Jews and other targeted groups feed off a climate of intolerance and xenophobia in which anti-Semitism and Holocaust denial are allowed to flourish. It is therefore vital that states continue to promote awareness of the Holocaust, including the genocide of Roma and Sinti.

This sixth edition of this report forms part of ODIHR's work to promote Holocaust remembrance and commemoration in line with its mandate agreed by all 57 OSCE participating States. Its publication would not have been possible without the support of these countries in implementing their own commitments to promote Holocaust remembrance.

As in the fifth edition, this report combines information on Holocaust remembrance and education with information on efforts to study and commemorate the genocide of Roma and Sinti during this period. This reflects ODIHR's mandate to address both of these human rights violations.

I am pleased to present this comprehensive overview and hope that it will inspire participating States to build on their efforts to promote Holocaust commemoration and education. ODIHR looks forward to continuing its assistance to states in countering anti-Semitism, racism and other forms of intolerance and discrimination.

OSCE COMMITMENTS AND ACTIVITIES

This publication provides information on when, where and how OSCE participating States promote the commemoration and study of the Holocaust, including the genocide of Roma and Sinti, in line with their OSCE commitments. The information was provided via an online questionnaire disseminated by ODIHR to all participating States. It is hoped that by sharing this information, governments will be encouraged to draw on each other's good practices and to enhance their own activities. In line with the OSCE Action Plan for the Promotion of Gender Equality,<sup>1</sup> this edition of the publication integrates a gender perspective, widening our focus and analysing in greater detail the persecution of other victim groups under National Socialism.

OSCE participating States have committed to "promote remembrance of and, as appropriate, education about the tragedy of the Holocaust, and the importance of respect for all ethnic and religious groups."<sup>2</sup> These commitments are an important element of the OSCE's mandate to promote tolerance and non-discrimination. Holocaust remembrance and education also form part of the framework of the Action Plan on Improving the Situation of Roma and Sinti within the OSCE Area. Adopted in 2003, this framework calls for the inclusion of Roma history and culture, and in particular the genocide of Roma and Sinti during the Holocaust, in educational materials. Civil society has also called for greater efforts to commemorate the Roma and Sinti genocide, including the designation of 2 August as a day of remembrance for Roma and Sinti victims of the Holocaust.<sup>3</sup> Consequently, this publication provides an overview of governmental and non-governmental practices in the OSCE area to commemorate all victims of the Holocaust, including the genocide of Roma and Sinti.

As this publication demonstrates, the majority of OSCE participating States are actively involved in commemorating the Holocaust [LINK TO INFOGRAPHIC]. Although these activities occur throughout the year, 40 participating States have designated 27 January – the International Day of Commemoration in Memory of the Victims of the Holocaust – as the key date for promoting Holocaust remembrance, research and education. For more information on the significance of specific Holocaust Memorial Days, please refer to the summary at the end of the Introduction.

The remembrance of and teaching about the Holocaust form a key part of the OSCE’s efforts to promote tolerance and non-discrimination across the region,<sup>4</sup> while other regional and international bodies have also reported on and highlighted the importance of Holocaust commemoration and education.<sup>5</sup>

In November 2014, the OSCE held a high-level commemorative event to mark the 10th anniversary of the OSCE’s Berlin Declaration on Anti-Semitism highlighted the problems of Holocaust denial and distortion, resulting in participating States’ adoption of OSCE Ministerial Council Declaration No. 8/14 on “Enhancing Efforts to Combat Anti-Semitism”. The Declaration provides a comprehensive set of commitments related to addressing anti-Semitism, and affirms ODIHR’s mandate to “facilitate cooperation between governmental officials and civil society on issues related to [...] Holocaust remembrance” and to “facilitate the exchange of Good Practices among participating States on educational initiatives and other measures to [...] overcome challenges to Holocaust education.”<sup>6</sup>

In line with this mandate, ODIHR has developed a number of educational materials that directly address anti-Semitism and promote teaching of the Holocaust. In May 2018, the Office co-operated with UNESCO to co-publish Addressing Anti-Semitism Through Education: Guidelines for Policymakers, which includes guidance on educating students about the Holocaust.<sup>7</sup> Following this, in December 2019 ODIHR published a set of ten related teaching aids for use in the classroom, including two dealing directly with Holocaust education.<sup>8</sup> In addition, ODIHR co-operates with state institutions and civil society to share good practices on addressing anti-Semitism and promoting Holocaust education, including by translating its educational materials and holding train-the-trainer events.

Many OSCE participating States have committed to promote Holocaust commemoration and education through their membership of other international bodies, including the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance (IHRA) and the European Union. Currently, 31 of the 57 OSCE participating States are members of the IHRA, while 17 participating States have adopted the IHRA’s working definition of anti-Semitism.<sup>9</sup> Meanwhile, the European Parliament’s 2017 “Motion for resolution on combating antisemitism” calls on member states to adopt the IHRA working definition of anti-Semitism, promote the teaching of the Holocaust in schools and include information on Jewish history and contemporary life in school curricula.<sup>10</sup> These initiatives highlight the growing recognition of the role of Holocaust commemoration and education in addressing intolerance and anti-Semitism in the OSCE area and beyond

ODIHR also brings together relevant civil society and academia representatives to discuss experiences and practices in teaching about the Roma and Sinti genocide. In 2014 and 2015, the Office organized expert meetings to discuss approaches to teaching about the Roma and Sinti genocide in order to counter discrimination facing these communities today.<sup>11</sup> In particular, participants highlighted the problems of bias and negative perceptions, the absence of information about the Roma and Sinti genocide in curricula and the lack of teaching materials and resources. They also reflected on the gaps within existing research about the Roma and Sinti genocide, such as a lack of information about Roma soldiers who fought during the war and the impact of World War II on Roma and Sinti women. In this context, the multiple marginalization suffered by Roma women is an issue of specific concern and one that remains to be addressed through an intersectional lens.

Finally, ODIHR gathers information on hate crimes and incidents committed in OSCE participating States that is published each year in a detailed report.<sup>12</sup> One type of hate crime regularly identified in these reports is that of vandalism directed against Holocaust memorials in participating States, as well as the use of insults and threats related to the Holocaust during attacks against individuals.<sup>13</sup> The most prevalent type of anti-religious hate incidents reported to ODIHR in its 2018 hate crime data collection was attacks against property: a total of 654 anti-Semitic incidents involved damage to property, with 149 targeting monuments. More information on anti-Semitic hate crimes received from governments and civil society can be found on ODIHR’s Hate Crime Reporting Website.<sup>14</sup>

Thirty-four participating States responded and answered all the sections of the questionnaire while two States responded and provided a partially completed questionnaire.

ODIHR has been collecting information on efforts to promote the commemoration and study of the Holocaust in the OSCE area since 2008.<sup>15</sup> The information is systematically collected by ODIHR from OSCE participating States via an online questionnaire. The questionnaire was developed in consultation with experts in the field of Holocaust commemoration and following feedback from representatives of participating States. A total of 36 participating States submitted questionnaires to ODIHR for the current edition.

ODIHR’s Contact Point on Roma and Sinti Issues (CPRSI) has also developed a separate publication on Teaching and Commemorating the Roma and Sinti Genocide: Practices within the OSCE Area.<sup>16</sup> Starting in 2018, data and information collected from participating States on the study and commemoration of both events has been published in one single publication.

The information included for each participating State depends on the completeness of the response.<sup>17</sup> As such, responsibility for the accuracy of the information falls on participating States. The report covers four main areas: commemoration, education and research, memorial sites and good practices. The Overview presents quantitative data on the Holocaust and Roma and Sinti genocide commemoration, education and research, including a comparison of statistical data presented in the 2018 and 2020 reports. The Country Overviews describe the following:

Commemoration: Provides information on when commemorative events are held, which groups are commemorated and whether the events are established officially.

Education and Research: Provides details on research into the Holocaust, educational activities, teaching training, and the information included in textbooks and extracurricular activities.

Memorial Sites: Information on which groups are commemorated, as well as how the sites are funded. The term “memorial sites” does not encompass concentration, labour and transition camps, and refers only to monuments, commemorative plaques etc.

Good Practices: Provides ideas and initiatives for other participating States to consider using in their Holocaust commemoration and education activities.

Annexes provide more detailed information to allow the reader to compare participating States’ submissions. There are six annexes included:

- Annex 1 Contains information on civil society participation in commemorative events and the availability of state funds for civil society-organized events.
- Annex 2 Contains a comparative table outlining what states teach about the Holocaust and the availability of teacher training for this subject.
- Annex 3 Provides a country-by-country description of the memorial sites and museums mentioned in the Overview.
- Annex 4 Provides a list of institutions carrying out research on the Holocaust and on the extermination and persecution of Roma and Sinti during World War II.
- Annex 5 Contains a list of supporting documents, resources and additional information on research and education about the Holocaust provided by participating States.
- Annex 6 Presents a glossary of internationally recognized definitions related to the Holocaust.

Overview

Graph 1

Does the participating State commemorate the Holocaust?

Of the 57 OSCE participating States, 37 provided responses to the section of the ODIHR questionnaire concerning their efforts to promote Holocaust commemoration.<sup>18</sup> The answers indicate that the Holocaust and the genocide of Roma and Sinti during this time are commemorated widely throughout the OSCE area. Thirty-five states reported that

Furthermore, 22 participating States indicated that they have established official days to commemorate the Roma and Sinti genocide,<sup>24</sup> while 14 states commemorate the event non-officially (Graph 4).<sup>25</sup>

Of those that commemorate the Roma and Sinti genocide, how many states have established an official commemoration day?

Moreover, 15 participating States reported that they officially commemorate other victim groups of National Socialism.<sup>26</sup> Importantly, these findings display the total number of participating States commemorating the Holocaust, the genocide of Roma and Sinti and/or other groups victimized by National Socialism, regardless of whether they are commemorated jointly or separately.

Of the 35 participating States that commemorate the Holocaust, the majority (22) reported observing 27 January as an official Holocaust Remembrance Day.<sup>27</sup> Importantly,

Thirty-six participating States responded to the part of the ODIHR questionnaire on education and research about the Holocaust.<sup>48</sup> The responses suggest that the Holocaust, the genocide of Roma and Sinti and crimes committed against other groups under National Socialism are widely researched throughout the OSCE region. Thirty-three states indicated that the Holocaust is a subject of research in academic institutions in their country,<sup>49</sup> while the genocide of Roma and Sinti is researched in 20 participating States.<sup>50</sup> Crimes committed against other victim groups under National Socialism are researched in 20 states (Graph 10).<sup>51</sup>

The data received demonstrates the prevalence of teaching on these subjects within national curricula. In particular, 21 OSCE participating States noted that the Holocaust is taught in primary schools.<sup>52</sup> All the 36 states that responded said that the Holocaust features in curricula for secondary and upper-secondary schools.<sup>53</sup> Moreover, in 27 participating States the Holocaust is also taught at the college and university level (Graph 11).<sup>54</sup>

Memorial Sites

Overview

Number of participating States with memorial sites dedicated to the victims of National Socialism

Of the 37 OSCE participating States that responded to ODIHR’s questionnaire, 35 answered the section on memorial sites.<sup>68</sup> The data indicate that most states have at least one memorial site dedicated to the Holocaust, with 11 indicating that they do not have any memorial sites.<sup>69</sup> As such, 24 OSCE States confirmed that they have created memorial sites dedicated to the victims of National Socialism,<sup>70</sup> representing over two thirds of states that responded to the survey (Graph 16). This highlights the continuing determination throughout the OSCE region to support Holocaust education and commemoration through the creation of dedicated memorial sites.

Type of funding for all memorial sites

Twenty-five states depend on the provision of state-funding for these sites,<sup>71</sup> of which 15 are wholly dependent on this type of funding.<sup>72</sup> Only Switzerland indicated that their memorial sites rely exclusively on private funding, including the Swiss Memorial for Refugees during World War II. Of the 24 states with state-funded memorial sites, 17 also have privately-funded sites for commemorating the victims of this period (Graph 17).<sup>73</sup> This highlights the continuing relevance of private funding within Holocaust education and commemoration, while national authorities remain the main source of funding for memorial sites dedicated to the victims of National Socialism.

68 The 35 states that responded to the section on memorial sites are: Albania, Andorra, Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Moldova, Monaco, Montenegro, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Romania, the Russian Federation, Serbia, Slovakia, Slovenia, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, the United Kingdom and the United States. Azerbaijan provided information unconnected to memorial sites dedicated to the victims of National Socialism, and as such was categorized as not having completed this section.

69 The 11 states where there are no memorial sites dedicated to the Holocaust

72 The 15 states where there is no private funding for memorial sites are: Albania, Andorra, Azerbaijan, Belgium, Bulgaria, Croatia, Finland, Greece, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Monaco, Montenegro, Poland and Portugal.

73 The 17 states with both state and privately-funded memorial sites are: Austria, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Hungary, Italy, Luxembourg, Moldova, Norway, Romania, the Russian Federation, Serbia, Slovakia, Slovenia, the United Kingdom and the United States.

Of those who responded to the survey, the majority of states (25) have at least one memorial site dedicated to Jewish victims of the Holocaust.<sup>74</sup> Portugal is the only State with a memorial site that does not specifically commemorate Jewish victims of the Holocaust, but rather pays respects to refugees, including Jewish refugees (Graph 18).<sup>75</sup>

Survey responses also highlighted the prevalence of state funding for memorial sites dedicated to Jewish victims of the Holocaust, with Nine states solely dependent on state funding for these memorial sites.<sup>76</sup> Overall, 24 states hold at least one state-funded memorial site or museum for Jewish victims.<sup>77</sup> A sizeable number of States (18) also rely on private <sup>75</sup> In its response to the questionnaire, Portugal specifically mentioned that the memorial primarily commemorates Jewish refugees who fled from Nazi persecution, which is why this memorial site is included in this section.

Type of funding for memorial sites dedicated to other victim groups

Thirteen States indicated that they have memorial sites for other victim groups persecuted under National Socialism.<sup>81</sup> In most cases, these memorial sites are unique to the national context of the responding states. This is highlighted by the case of Slovakia, where the “Museum of the Slovak National Uprising” commemorates all those who were persecuted and exterminated during World War II.

In all states with memorial sites to commemorate other victim groups, at least one memorial site is state-funded. In Austria, the state has funded multiple memorial sites ranging from a monument for victims of political resistance to a memorial site for the victims of the Nazi “euthanasia” programme. Only Austria, Germany and the United States indicated that they have privately-funded memorial sites for other victim groups of the Holocaust in addition to their state-funded sites.

The responses to this section of the questionnaire highlight a widespread recognition of the importance of memorial sites in educating people about the Holocaust, the genocide of Roma and Sinti and crimes committed against other groups under National Socialism. Nevertheless, there is still work to be done to ensure that people throughout the OSCE region have the opportunity to learn about and commemorate the victims of the Holocaust.

<sup>81</sup> The 13 states with memorial sites for other victim groups are: Austria, Croatia, Germany, Italy, Norway, Poland, Portugal, the Russian Federation, Serbia, Slovakia, Slovenia, the United Kingdom and the United States.
